(57) Abstract :
A user equipment (UE) configured to determine, for each radio access technology (RAT) of a plurality of RATs, a first list of bands on which a public land mobile network (PLMN) is expected to be deployed and a second list of bands including bands not included in the first list, wherein the first list is determined based on a region where the UE is currently located and PLMN deployment information, select a search pattern for performing a cell search based on a current UE scenario, perform a first phase of the cell search and when the first phase of the cell search is unsuccessful and no cell is selected, perform a second phase of the cell search by either scanning frequencies included in the second list of bands for the first priority RAT or scanning frequencies included in the first list of bands for a second priority RAT.

(57) Abstract :
Provided in the embodiments of the present invention are a communications method a terminal device and a network device. The method comprises: a terminal device determining a first frequency-domain resource said first frequency-domain resource being a usable resource preconfigured to support the use of a first TTI to transmit a first physical channel in a first target time unit and the length of time of the first TTI being equal to the length of time of the first target time unit; a terminal device determining a second frequency-domain resource said second frequency-domain resource being determined to be used for using a second TTI to transmit a second physical channel in a second target time unit; the second TTI being not smaller than the first TTI and the second target time unit at least partially overlapping with the first target time unit; a terminal device determining a third frequency-domain resource the third frequency-domain resource containing at least part of the frequency-domain resource of the second frequency-domain resource and said third frequency-domain resource being a maximum usable frequency-domain resource supporting the use of a first TTI to transmit a first physical channel in a first target time unit. The embodiments of the present application increase resource utilization.
